Dear Professor dell'Isola,

Re: Visiting the Mathematical Institute, University of Oxford

I am writing to confirm that the Mathematical Institute will be pleased to welcome you as an Academic Visitor to Oxford for the period 28th February to 4th March, 2016.

The Institute acts as a centre for the organisation of mathematics teaching and research throughout the University. It houses the Whitehead Library which is the main mathematical research library and is a short walk from the Radcliffe Science Library and the Bodleian. You are welcome to use the Institute's wide range of computing facilities in addition to the Institute's Common Room.

Access to shared office accommodation within the Institute is limited, but desk space is routinely provided, as standard. You have been allocated a desk in S2.38. Please see overleaf for standard conditions applying to all visitors.

Please note that if you are eligible for reimbursement of expenses you must obtain prior approval from your sponsor and adhere to the university's financial regulations found at <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/finance/expenses/guide/>.

During term time we have a full programme of lectures and seminars which, of course, you are entitled to attend.

We look forward to welcoming you to Oxford.

Yours sincerely

pp.
